On 1 July 1992, the New Zealand government announced its intention to privatise the state-owned electricity supply company, the Electricity Corporation of New Zealand (ECNZ). The government's intention was to sell the company to the private sector, and to secure the electricity supply for the future. 1. The first thing I noticed when I stepped out of the plane was the cold. It was a sharp contrast to the warm, humid air of the South. I shivered as I walked down the stairs, my hands tucked into my pockets. The ground beneath my feet was a mix of dirt and gravel, and the air smelled of diesel and exhaust. I looked up at the sky, where a few wispy clouds were scattered across a pale blue expanse. The sun was just beginning to rise, casting a soft, golden glow over the landscape. I took a deep breath, feeling the cool air fill my lungs. It was a strange sensation, being so far from home, yet so close to nature. I glanced at my watch, noting the time. It was early, but I knew I had a long day ahead of me. I straightened my back and took a step forward, ready to face whatever came my way.

Time (h)	4°C (Log CFU/ml)	10°C (Log CFU/ml)	15°C (Log CFU/ml)	20°C (Log CFU/ml)
